Money Hampers Dag's Efforts in the Congo

By A. I. GOLDBERG

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Dag Hammarskjold is getting uncomfortably close to a cash deadline in the Congo.

The U.N. secretary-general still is trying desperately to recruit men to maintain a strong U. N. force there in a race against the Soviets and dwindling money reserves.

With the U.N. operation facing financial collapse at the turn of the year, Hammarskjold was granted special borrowing powers for three months to keep it going. Nearly two months have passed.

Just 10 days away is the resumed session of the General Assembly that must arrange for financing the U.N. role in the Congo for the rest of this year.

The assembly also will have to dredge out of the members the funds for paying last year's net Congo bill of $48.5 million and for covering what Hammarskjold has borrowed—known to be in excess of $12 million.

So far the United States has kicked in with a total of $44,962,450—$34,645,211 in cash plus an unpaid credit of $10,317,239, for picking up the tab for airlifting troops to the Congo last summer.

The gross Congo cost in 1960 was more than $60 million but the U. S. airlift forgiveness plus similar action by Britain, the Soviet Union and others, reduced the net bill.

There is still no sign—and none is expected—of the Soviet bloc paying the $9,245,650 total they were assessed on the regular U.N. basis for their 1960 share. They announced during the first part of the assembly session they would not kick in a cent—and they haven't.

The Soviet Union's share is $6,556,425. The other bloc countries range from the Ukraine's $871,000 to Albania's $19,373.

Fidel Castro's Cuba also can be counted on to follow Moscow's lead and renege on its $121,000 assessment.

The total Congo bill for the six months operations in 1960 and the first three months of 1961 was an estimated net $72.5 million.

May Live 120 Years by End of Century

CHICAGO (AP)—Life expectancy of 120 years may be common in America by the end of this century, if scientific advances continue.

Even longer life expectancies will not be improbable in the 21st century, if scientific advances continue.

This is what the Journal of the American Medical Association said today.

"Life expectancy in America in the last half of this century seems destined to approach that which the Hunza has experienced for many generations," the journal said.

Hunza, a little known frontier land in northern Pakistan, has a population of about 25,000. Entrance visas and rugged terrain have made Hunza virtually inaccessible to Western world tourists.

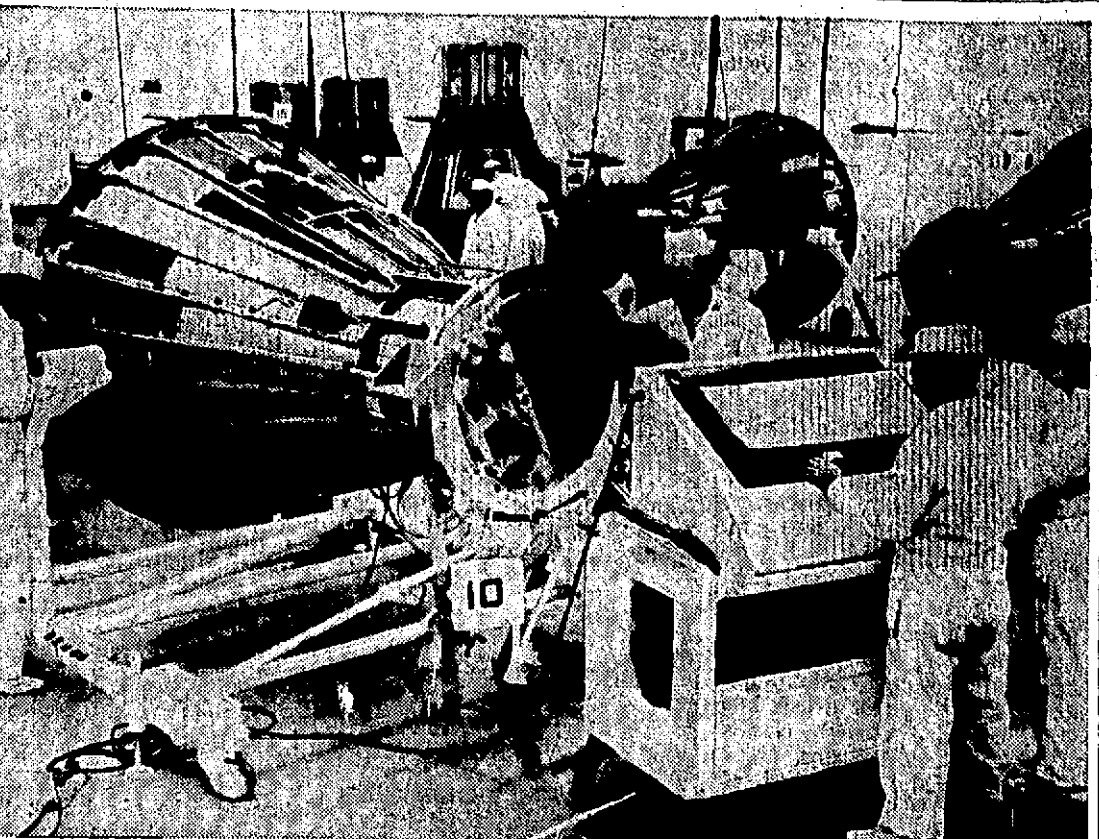

The journal said evidence that the Hunza males live to be 120 or even 140 years of age is not documented with reliable statistics but is believed within the limits of possibility.

The Hunza people eat little animal protein, few eggs and no prepared vitamin supplements. Their principal diet is whole grains, fresh fruit, fresh vegetables, goat's milk and cheese, rice and grape wine.

"If scientific advances continue to be productive, and there is little doubt but that this will be factual—with the eradication of infection, prevention of cancer, and inhibition of progression of degenerative diseases—life expectancy should approach that of the fabled Hunzas by the end of this century."

Meaning of Freedom Is Aim, Hays

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP)—

Brooks Hays, Tennessee Valley Authority director who will become an assistant secretary of state next week, says "America's mission is to show the world the meaning of freedom."

As Americans, he told a Brotherhood Week Community dinner Thursday night, "We must show to the world that we know what freedom is even though we are a nation of many peoples and many faiths."

Hays is a former Arkansas congressman and one-time president of the Southern Baptist Convention.

Rep. Dale Alford of Little Rock unseated Hays from congress in 1958, partly as a result of Hays' moderate stand in Little Rock's school integration crisis.

"One of our big tasks is to 'unlearn' the people about Biblical teachings in relation to race," said Hays, who added that "there is too much misquotation on this score."

"We cannot work out all our problems by legislation, but legislation will work as a guidepost to create the proper climate."

Soviet-owned Newspaper Raps Dag

STEYNING, England (AP)—An

editor of Pravda, the Communist party paper, assailed Dag Hammarskjold at a British-Soviet cultural conference today and was rebuked by a British former ambassador to Moscow.

Victor Maevsky, one of the editors of Pravda, asserted at the opening session that the United Nations secretary-general "has become hateful to the people of the world after the tragic events of the Congo."

"The murder of Patrice Lumumba and his comrades crowns the criminal career of Hammarskjold," Maevsky said. "Every decent-minded man in the world sees the blood of Patrice Lumumba on the hands of that servant of the colonialists."

This brought a sharp reply from Sir William Hayter, the ex-ambassador who is chairman of the conference sponsored by the Great Britain-U.S.S.R. Association, a private group formed to improve relations between the two countries.

"I regret this abuse against the secretary of the United Nations," Hayter said.

"Many of us make mistakes but the kind of accusation made by Maevsky is not shared by everyone in the world, and the cause of peaceful coexistence cannot be improved by such an attack."

Jap Raids Jail 2,022 Hoodlums

TOKYO (AP) — In sweeping

raids on suspected racketeers, hoodlums and delinquent juveniles, Japanese police arrested 2,022 persons today in Tokyo and 13 other prefectures in central Japan.

They reported confiscating 29 swords and daggers, 75 pistols and 131 rounds of ammunition and various kinds of gambling equipment.

Seven thousand police were mobilized for the action and almost 700 places were searched.

Objects to Aid to Church Schools

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—A resolution

opposing allocation of any federal aid money for education to church schools was adopted by the Arkansas House today.

The resolution was sponsored by Pope County Rep. Clyde Kinslow, a Presbyterian minister.

If the resolution also is adopted by the Senate, a copy will be sent to the President and to each member of the Arkansas congressional delegation.

The House also adopted a resolution opposing repeal of the so-called Connely Reservation to World Court jurisdiction. This question now is pending in the United States Senate.

Union County Rep. Jim Pomroy, sponsor of the resolution, said the Connely Reservation protected United States citizens from the jurisdiction of foreign courts.

Bill Could Save State House Seat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep.

Frank Chelf, D-Ky., said Thursday he is optimistic over prospects for his bill which would increase the size of the House and avert the loss, by some states, of a seat or two.

He said the final product might not add 34 members, as his bill proposes, but that there might be some "modest" increase.

An increase to 450 from the present 435 would save one of two seats Arkansas is slated to lose. Actually, House membership now totals 437—to provide one member each from Alaska and Hawaii—but will revert to 435 when the House convenes for the 88th Congress in January, 1963.

Under the automatic reapportionment of the House because of a population shift, some 16 states including Kentucky, are slated to lose House seats in 1963. Other states will gain.

Chelf has proposed that the membership be increased from 435 to 469, an action, he said, which would keep 12 of the 16 states from losing any seats. Two other states—Arkansas and Massachusetts—slated to lose two seats, would lose only one.

He said some compromise increase might be possible if House leadership would agree to support the bill, is now pending in the House Judiciary Committee.

There have been reports that Speaker Rayburn, D-Tex., might support some increase in the size of the House but he has not confirmed this.

House leaders close to Rayburn have said they doubt if he would favor an increase since he is known to feel that any move to boost the membership now would set a precedent for similar moves in 1970, 1980 and so on.

One leader said that when the congressional reorganization bill was passed in 1946 the talk was in terms of reducing, not enlarging the House.

There has been no increase in the size of the House for more than 40 years.

Chelf said an Arkansas seat could be saved if the membership were increased to 450. Arkansas is slated to lose two of its six seats unless the House is enlarged.

In anticipation of some such congressional action, bills have been introduced in the Arkansas Legislature to redistrict the state into five districts. The legislature earlier passed and the governor signed a bill to set up four districts.

DeGaulle Has Dedicated New Port

PARIS (AP)—President Charles

de Gaulle today dedicated a new $24-million steel and glass terminal building at Orly Field, one of the world's largest and best equipped airports.

The president told a crowd of 2,000 the terminal is "one of the most striking French realizations, aiding man to use the skies."

De Gaulle made a quick tour of the five-story building, which houses restaurants, 10 bars, 120 stores in a shopping section, a 60-room hotel, a movie theater and a hospital.

There are 3,000 electric clocks and 4,000 loudspeakers spotted around the terminal.

In the main passenger waiting room a huge flight board lists arrivals and departures in colored lights, which are matched by colored directional arrows to help passengers and visitors find the right gate.

As De Gaulle arrived at the field a man in the crowd shouted a hostile remark.

De Gaulle paused and walked toward the man, who wore on his lapel the insignia of outspoken opponents of his Algerian policy. At De Gaulle's approach, the man disappeared into the crowd.

Unperturbed, De Gaulle shook several hands in the crowd, then walked casually into the terminal.

Would Merge State Court Systems

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The

state's chancery and circuit courts would be merged into a single system of circuit courts by Jan. 1, 1965, under a bill introduced in Arkansas Senate.

Sen. Robert Hays Williams of Russellville, a lawyer who proposed the bill Thursday, said that Arkansas was one of only a few states which still maintains separate court systems for equity and law cases. Williams said the two should be combined in the interests of efficiency, economy and justice.

Williams' bill calls for appointment of an eight-member court Redistricting Committee to formulate the districts for the new single court system. The 1963 legislature would have to approve the plan.

It also has been proposed that redistricting of the present court systems be studied, with changes to be recommended to the 1963 legislature.

Ship Salvage Rights Sold

TRENTON, N. J. (AP)—Salvage

rights for the sunken Italian liner, Andrea Doria, have been sold to a Canadian syndicate, Armando Conli, president of the Trenton Beverage Co., said Thursday.

He sold out to the Andrea Doria Salvage Project, Ltd., Montreal, headed by J. C. Wolke.

Conli said the Canadian group would start the salvage operation around June.

The 29,000-ton luxury liner, lying in 225 feet of water, sank in July 1956 off Nantucket when it collided with a Swedish liner.

Conli said the cost of the project kept growing and finally became impractical for him to finance. He said the Canadian laws allow more liberal financing.

Iowa's Third Embezzler Gets Half a Million

KNOXVILLE, Iowa (AP)—Ex-

aminers were at work today clearing up details of Iowa's third big bank embezzlement in two months.

The latest came to light Friday when Eldon L. Job, 59, president of the Community National Bank and Trust Co. of Knoxville hanged himself, leaving an estimated half-million-dollar shortage that stunned this town of 7,817 in south central Iowa.

Job left a "dead man's confession" saying that he used the bank's money through forged notes to cover bad investments and to make donations around town.

Unlike the situation at Sheldon in northwest Iowa where a $2-million embezzlement closed the Sheldon National Bank, the Knoxville institution was covered by a $1-million fidelity bond which officials said more than took care of the shortage. Business at Community National went on as usual.

The Sheldon bank closed on Jan. 16 with the arrest of the assistant cashier, Burnice Geiger. She admitted the embezzlement and later was sentenced to 15 years in prison.

The third case occurred at Malvern in southwest Iowa, Jan. 30. John E. Willard, 40, vice president and cashier of the Malvern Trust & Savings Bank, admitted the embezzlement, after a $55,000 shortage was discovered.

Private funeral services were to be held today for Job, Knoxville's erstwhile leading citizen. He had been in the banking business here for 40 years.

He not only headed Community National, which he formed through a merger in 1933, but held a majority stock interest in Knoxville's other bank, Iowa State Savings.

His family, one of the best known in town, included his wife, Bernice, and his two sons, Ned, assistant cashier of Community National and Louis, vice president of the other bank. A daughter, Judith, is a student at Drake University.

Drops Charge in African Race Issue

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa

(AP)—The government withdrew its immorality charges against a Swedish white woman novelist and a South African Negro political leader today. South Africa had been receiving a bad press in Europe as a result of the case.

The case against Sarah Lidman, 37, and Peter Ntshhe attracted wide attention after the two were arrested at Mrs. Lidman's suburban Johannesburg apartment on the evening of Feb. 3. They were charged with violating South Africa's immorality law, which forbids sexual relations between members of different races.

Today's court proceedings lasted less than three minutes. The South African Press Association said the charges were quashed "on the instructions of the attorney general."

The case had focused attention on South Africa's strict racial segregation laws, especially in Sweden, where newspapers denounced the charges. South African newspapers, many of them critical of the racial laws, also were planning to use the case to spotlight abuses, which could have proved embarrassing to Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd at the Commonwealth prime ministers conference in London next month.

South Africa's membership in the British Commonwealth is under fire from other Commonwealth countries because of its racial laws. The question of South Africa's continuing membership will arise at the meeting because a referendum has changed the nation into a republic.

The government attached one condition to its withdrawal of the charges, that Mrs. Lidman must leave South Africa before Tuesday when her visa expires.

Perhaps the Most Essential Non-essential Item in Use Is Just a Common Pencil

By MARY ANITA LASETER

What is, perhaps, the most essential non-essential item used by the modern man, woman and child? Many answers probably come to mind, but let's try this one.

The pencil.

Next week is Pencil Week "to foster understanding of the wood-cased lead pencil, its 350 varieties, and its many uses in home, office, factory, and school."

The lowly pencil is used and misused so often by so many that its existence is simply taken for granted. Like everything else though, it has a history. The first distinct evidence of the pencil appeared in 1565 in a treatise on fossils, when reference was made to an article for writing formed of wood and a piece of lead.

No doubt, the reference was to graphite like that found in the famous Borrowdale mine in Cumberland, England. Two centuries later in Nuremberg, Germany, the family of Faber experimented with pulverizing graphite and then cementing it into solid blocks, but the results were not useful pencils.

The pencil as we know it today was created in 1795 by N. J. Conte. Graphite ground with selected clays, pressed into sticks, and fired in a kiln is the method which forms the basis of the manufacture of modern pencils.

In the manufacturing process, leads are made into a mass, then shaped, dried, and fired in a kiln from 600 degrees to 1,200 degrees centigrade. (If pencil lead can't be treated like that, how can it be possible for the same thing to break so easily? A Life's little mystery.)

Are you the nervous type who chews on your pencil? More than likely you are biting on cedar, for that is the wood found to be most suitable (for making pencils not for chewing) It is a fine, aromatic, soft wood from the U.S. But you know what cedar is. It's the other half of the word, chest.

Don't tell me. I realize this has only been concerning pencils with black leads, and there are other kinds (ask any student). Those colored leads are not made exactly the same, as the firing process is eliminated.

Many people will say the most useful end of the pencil has not been mentioned. It's the part that wears out first—the eraser. Whether that is a sign of being careful or careless is cause for debate. It is made of rubber, an ingredient so named because the only way it was used at first was to "rub" or erase.

Pencils come in assorted sizes and colors, but a round, yellow one about seven inches long with an eraser is still the most popular. To keep them from rolling and some are hexagon shaped. To make them more useful to the donor advertisements are sometimes placed on them. For this latter reason they are frequently extra large, extra small, extra long, or extra short.

No one hesitates to buy, borrow, give away, or use a pencil. They are stuffed in men's shirts, lost in women's purses, and stuck behind students' ears. They are the most essential non-essential item in use today.

Trieste Rioting in Dock Strike

riot squads today battled thousands of striking shipyard workers who sought to block traffic in downtown Trieste by sitting in the streets.

At least four policemen and an undetermined number of strikers suffered minor injuries in the hour-long skirmishing.

Shipyard workers in this north Italian port on the Adriatic have been striking for several days, seeking improved wages and other benefits.

After an hour of fighting today, calm was restored. But a new kind of traffic jam promptly developed when municipal transport workers called a one-hour strike to protest the police intervention against the shipyard workers.

The transport workers halted their buses and tramways where they were.

Activity Has Picked Up at U. S. Airports

NEW YORK (AP) — Airports

around the nation hummed with activity again today and the big passenger planes zoomed into the air in increasing numbers with the end of a flight engineers' strike.

The six-day work stoppage, worst tieup in American aviation history, cost crippled airlines an estimated $40 million.

Many more millions were lost by vacation resorts and industries connected with air travel. Railroads and bus lines reaped an unexpected revenue harvest, however.

Travel plans of an estimated 600,000 persons were affected during the shutdown period. Many of them were stranded away from home when the strike began, and had difficulties obtaining alternate transportation.

With whine of big jets and the roar of propeller driven aircraft once more heard on the runways, Pan American World Airways was the first to restore full service. It announced this morning that operations were back to 100 per cent.

Other lines ranged downward to as low as 30 per cent. Some said it might take them a day or two more to get all schedules going again.

Miami Beach estimated its revenue loss at $3 million a day during the strike. So did the Caribbean area including Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and the Bahamas.

The end of the strike was announced personally Thursday by President Kennedy.

Castro Busy Shaping Cuba to Red Mold

By ROBERT BERRELLEZ

HAVANA (A) — Fidel Castro recast his government today in a Communist-shape - mold and gave Ernesto Guevara direction of the nation's industries.

The sweeping governmental reorganization after a marathon Cabinet session also spelled out the functions of the three month Central Planning Council headed by the prime minister. His brother and heir apparent, Armed Forces Minister Raul Castro, was named council vice president.

Expected for several weeks, the reshuffle came months after teams of Cuban administrative technicians visited Iron Curtain countries. They spent considerable time in Czechoslovakia and diplomats here said the bulk of the changes were drawn up in Prague.

Guevara, the ultraleft Argentine soldier-of-fortune who fought with the Castros in the hills of Cuba, was clearly established as third in line in the revolutionary hierarchy by being named head of the key new Ministry of Industries. He had used his previous job as head of the National Bank to shake off economic ties with the United States and link Cuba's economy to the Soviet Union and the Communist bloc.

The council, which includes Guevara and all other ministers, was made the overall supervisor of the nation's economic life, much as such councils function in the Communist states.

But Guevara was given virtual dictatorship powers over the nation's industries. Among his powers, he was given specific authority to "create, dissolve and modify" all state industries and to establish their "economic, financial and juridical direction and administration."

The petroleum and mines institutes and the administrative departments of industrialization and of sugar mills were placed under his immediate jurisdiction. Both formerly were under the Agrarian Reform Institute, which mushroomed into a mammoth economic exclamation after it was created to take over the nation's farm lands from private owners.

In his new post Guevara is expected to spur Cuban industrialization to carry out Castro's announced aim of making Cuba no longer dependent on agriculture, and particularly on sugar, which has been the life blood of the island.

A number of complete industrial plants have been sent to Cuba from Communist-bloc countries. Government leaders say at least 60 will be going full-blast this year.

The law creating Guevara's new

Tornadoes and Floods Rip 4 Southern States

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Floods of major proportions swept central Alabama and Mississippi today and continued rains gave indications that the situation will get worse.

While high waters displaced thousands of persons in four Deep South states, tornadoes and damaging high winds brought more woe to at least three other Southern states.

The Red Cross in Washington said 2,800 families have been affected by flooding in Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia. National Guard and civil defense evacuations will send the figure much higher.

Six thousand persons have been displaced at Hattiesburg, Miss., by flood waters of the Leaf River. A third of that city is under water—some as much as 12 feet deep.

Tornadoes and high winds uprooted trees and damaged buildings in Alabama, Georgia and South Carolina. No serious injuries were reported.

The threat of bad weather continued with a Weather Bureau report of possible severe thunderstorms, hail, damaging winds and some tornadoes expected in Southwest Alabama, central and south-west Georgia.

The Weather Bureau at Montgomery, Ala., said the Tallapoosa River, coursing through central Alabama should rise rapidly Saturday. All gates at one dam on the Tallapoosa were open and the water level rose to within six inches of capacity at Martin Dam.

Opening the Martin Dam flood gates would send thousands of gallons of water rushing down the Tallapoosa to the Alabama which already is causing major flooding at Montgomery.

Reporting for that city, the Weather Bureau said: "This is a major and severe flood. Take all possible precautions."

A. R. Long, Montgomery's chief meteorologist, added: "We're in a hell of a fix."

The Cahaba River spread beyond its banks 25 miles northward from where it flows into the Alabama below Montgomery. Sheriff Jim Clark estimated that 125 families have been displaced by the rising Cahaba. An undetermined number of persons, mostly in rural areas, are unaccounted for. A National Guard helicopter, used to locate marooned families, was grounded by bad weather.

The Alabama, already pouring through streets at Montgomery, broke over its banks at Selma, 50 miles to the west.

Evacuations also continued at Gadsden, Ala., where the Coosa River spilled into residential areas.

The Tombigbee, in west Alabama, continued on a rampage along its southern reaches. A crest of 60 to 70 feet is expected at Demopolis where flood stage is 48 feet.

Gov. John Patterson said emergency conditions exist in central Alabama but that he would assess full flood damage before asking for federal aid.

Evacuation continued in at least four towns in southern Mississippi. About 350 families had been moved Friday night.

Columbus, Ga., reported 2.27 inches of rain Friday flooded almost every low-lying residential area in that city along the Chattahoochee River.

Four small tornadoes struck in Georgia, causing heavy property damage. Three were in middle Georgia and one destroyed the post office at McBean, near Augusta.

A tornado injured several persons in Aiken County, S.C., just across the Savannah River from Augusta.

movies versus medicine

Three dollars a week doesn't take many people to the movies very often... but that's a fair guess of what families spend.

It adds up to $156 a year. And that's quite a bit more than the average family spends on doctor bills and medicines combined.

ministry said among the reasons was development of the internal market resulting from an increase in the people's purchasing power.

Statistics were not cited, and many persons question the assertion of a rising purchasing power. These quarters claim the national individual income has been reduced by the highest personal taxes in Cuban history, so-called voluntary contributions to the government, and freezing wages after some had been reduced below pre-Castro levels.

Mrs. H. H. McKenzie and Mrs. O. G. Hirst were among those from Prescott who saw the stage show "J. B." at the Texarkana College auditorium Tuesday night.

No Sound Is Dissonant Which Tells of Life

By HELEN WORDEN ERSKINE

Some might find these letters from dissenting readers worrisome, but I agree with Coleridge that "no sound is dissonant which tells of life."

Here is a letter from an indignant Back Bay Boston wife who takes exception to the advice I gave a widow consumed by self-condemnation because understanding and compassion for an emotionally upset husband came only after his death:

"I read your answer to R.A.S. with amazement," she writes. "You had such a fine opportunity (which you wasted), to say something of value to the thousands of women like R. A. S. . . . She committed a great sin and all sins are punished. I have been married many years to a nervous high strung man whom I have given the love and understanding which has saved him. The country is full of cold, non-understanding selfish wives. You in your position could do much good did you see it your way, and desire to right a great wrong."

I advised the widow to pick up the pieces and go on, thankful that, even though repentance came late, it did come. I gave that the country is full of cold, non-understanding selfish wives but I can't see why one who repented should be further chastised. It seemed to me she had been punished enough.

Dear Helen:
All this talk of mothers-in-law makes me wonder if there is a person left with a Christian point of view on the subject. I am a mother-in-law and have had a mother-in-law for 25 years. Long suffering is a Christian virtue. How about some Christian advice to your readers? — Mrs. C. H.

Dear Mrs. C. H.: By Christian point of view, I suppose you mean, "Love one another." There would be less dissension if more in-laws followed the Golden Rule. A mother-in-law is generally regarded as being neither fish, flesh nor fowl. Therefore, since she has no rights, no obligations and no status, it isn't considered sac-religious to joke about her; yet from the beginning of time she has been a person to reckon with. Frazier reminds us in "The Golden Bough" that, "The awe and dread with which the untutored savage contemplates his mother-in-law are amongst the most familiar facts of anthropology." Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for my leaflet, "Are You a Good Daughter-in-law?"

My reply to a high school teacher or whose teen-age daughters were getting out of hand, drew fire from a Pawtucket, R. I., reader. Among other things, I advised him to substitute suggestions for commands and quoted my former husband, the late John Erskine who was a great educator as well as a wise parent. He often remarked that parents who attempted to rule their children through fear, threats and whippings, immediately disqualified themselves as parents. My dissenting reader wrote:

Dear Helen:
It is wrong for you to criticize parents. Children should be made to listen no matter how old. When I see how these young ones talk back! That's when parents should act and I don't mean by the book. It's about time teen-agers realize that their parents aren't slaves. — J. B.

Rockefeller Buys Champion Heifer

HOUSTON (AP) — Winthrop Rockefeller paid $5,700 Thursday for a Santa Gertrudis heifer that holds a world record for championships.

Rockefeller bought the 1,040-pound Candy Cain 567 in a Santa Gertrudis purebred cattle auction at the Houston Fat Stock Show.

The purchase was made from the Rush Creek Ranch at Kerens, Tex.

Lady Cain set a world record Thursday when she was judged the grand champion Santa Gertrudis female of the 1961 show, her eighth consecutive grand championship.

Rockefeller bought the prize animal for his Winrock Farm at Morrilton, Ark.

The record price of $11,000 for a Santa Gertrudis female was set at an auction at the Winrock Farms in 1958.

You'll Have to Kill Me, They Did

TULARE, S. D. (AP)—Suspect in the slaying of his neighbor farmer Donald Blume, 37, kept to himself and had a rifle handy wherever he went.

He even strapped the weapon to his back when out plowing. Last summer, a neighbor complained that the farmer took a shot at him when the neighbor was driving past the farm.

Officers tried to arrest him, but Blume hid in a granary. He opened fire, then disappeared. Folks didn't see him for several months, then there were reports he was back. Sheriff's officers went to take away Blume's weapons Thursday, but the farmer sped away in his car.

This time, the law closed in. Defiant to the last Blume leaped out with a loaded rifle and shouted, "You'll have to kill me first."

An officer fatally wounded him with a shotgun blast.

WHAT EVER HAPPENED TO BABY JANE

In an instant Jane was there beside him, holding tightly to his arm. He looked down into her ashen face, felt a tremor pass through her body. Some very urgent and terrible communication seemed to pass between them. Turning away to the darkened hallway he pulled free of her. "I'm going up and have a look."

"No!" After a moment's hesitation, she followed quickly after him.

He moved on through the hallway, lumbering through the darkness to the living room and across to the bottom of the stairs, his footsteps muffled heavily with the drink. Jane hurried herself after him.

"Edwin—listen!"

Goated on rather than deterred by her objections, he grasped the handrail and pulled himself forward. At the top of the stairs, he stopped and waited for her to come up beside him.

"Turn on the lights."

"Edwin, please, listen . . ."

"Turn them on," Edwin said. She moved away from him then, obediently, and there was the click of a switch. The flame-shaped bulbs in the wrought-iron brackets, twins to those in the rehearsal room, came alight with a dusty orange glow.

"Go back down," she pleaded. "Please . . . let me tell you first."

Following the direction of her glance, he moved toward the entrance to the hallway.

"Edwin!"

There was such urgency in her cry that he stopped, and with a faint feeling of dismay, looked back at her. For a moment their eyes met and held, and then Jane shook her head in mute desperation. In that moment Edwin wished that he had not insisted on climbing the stairs. And then the words came spilling from her mouth, in a tide that would not be stopped.

"She was going to put me out—out of the house—out alone . . ."

She had begun to sob, as if telling him of some terrible grief. "She hates me! She thinks I don't know, but I do. She always did hate me—even when we were little—when we were children. All these years—"

She stopped suddenly, staring at him, blinking back her tears.

Edwin nodded back toward the hallway. "Your sister?"

For a moment longer she continued to stare and then, defeated, she nodded. "Yes, Blanche—she's in there . . . But it's all right—"

Edwin reached out to the door, tried it. "It's locked," he said. He turned to her, looked down into her frightened face. "You've locked her in, haven't you?"

"You promised you'd be my friend . . ."

Edwin held out his hand. "Where's the key?"

Jane took a faltering step backward.

Edwin stared at her, thinking how much she looked like Del there in the dimness, with that expression of hurt bewilderment on her silly, old face. In a red burst of sick anger he suddenly grabbed her by the shoulders and began to shake her.

He let go of her and again held out his hand. "Give it to me!"

Jane nodded, still gasping for breath. "Yes," she whispered. "It's in my room . . ."

At the first sound of the key touching the lock, Blanche strained upward in the darkness, struggling to face the door. She had won! Her heart beat wildly with the wonderful certainty that she had managed to bring help at last. A moment before, listening breathlessly to the voices outside her door, she had only been able to pray and hope.

The key turned in the lock and the door swung open. Still struggling, she was only obliquely aware of a dim fan of light upon the carpet, broken by a large stretching shadow. But then saw him there in the doorway in silhouette, stout, towering, enormous. She had to speak; she had to make him know what it meant to her that he had come.

In the darkness her voice was only a dry whisper, so weak she wasn't at all certain that he heard. "Thank God you've come."

Uncontrollably, tears began to stream down her face, tears of gratitude and relief. The figure in the doorway swayed slightly. But it made no move to come forward.

A moment passed, and then the man moved again, reaching out to the wall in search of the switch that contained the light switches.

When he found it, there was a faint click, and a harsh flood of light came down upon the room from the ceiling, forcing Blanche to close her eyes. There was a beat of silence and then, from the man, a sharp grunt of dismay.

Opening her eyes against the glare, Blanche looked up at him. "Take me—away—away from here . . . please!"

"Please . . . please!"
